COOLIDGE IS SURE VICTOR, IS FORECAST OF EXPERTS

Newspapermen Certain President Will Win Easily

BETTING 6 1-2 TO 1

Irreducible Minimum Of 269 Electoral Votes Seen

BY J. J. UNDERWOOD

(Special Cable to THE CHINA PRESS)

Washington, October 28.—With the attention of the entire American nation focussed on the final days of the Presidential campaign, betting tonight is 6½ to 1 that President Coolidge will be elected to succeed himself at the White House.

The consensus of opinion of fifty newspaper correspondents who have been trailing the candidates in their campaign peregrinations all summer gives John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain and Democratic nominee the "Solid South"; Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Progressive, the states of North Dakota and Montana, and an even chance in Iowa and Nebraska. President Coolidge, they believe, has a "fifty-fifty" chance in Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia.

It is their contention that President Coolidge will have an irreducible minimum of 269 electoral votes after the returns come in from next Tuesday's voting. This is three more than is necessary for election. It is probable, they say, that he will have more than 300 votes in the electoral college.

All of the candidates are making New York and the other northeastern states their final battleground.

Wahabis Refuse Settlement So Long As Emir Retains His Throne

(Reuter's Service)

Port Sudan, Oct. 29.—An attempt by the leading residents of Jeddah and Mecca to arrange terms with the Wahabis has failed. A representative of the Wahabis in Mecca states that peace is impossible while the Emir Ali remains on the throne. This appears to be an insurmountable obstacle.

Jeddah is now placed in a state of defence. Military preparations are being made to resist a threatened attack. Reinforcements are coming to Jeddah from Akaba. Many of the population are leaving.

Opposition Points To Difficulties Of England And Soviet

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Oct. 29.—While the Left newspapers applaud the recognition of Russia the Opposition accept the fact with resignation and derive comfort from the belief that real recognition will only be possible after a Franco-Russian conference, which will presumably take place in January, has settled the outstanding questions, especially debts. They declare that the Anglo-Soviet negotiations typify the difficulties ahead.

Le Figaro voices the extremist view, declaring that France is a vanquished State in the eyes of Moscow. "Under the shelter of the Red Flag and the cover of diplomatic immunity," the journal declares, "a few hundred determined knaves will establish a revolutionary propaganda center."

N. Y. MILLIONAIRE MAY SUCCEED GOV. WOOD AT MANILA

Mr. Waldo, Republican Worker, Unofficially Slated For Philippine Job

Mr. Rhinelander Waldo, millionaire, recently resigned as deputy commissioner of police of New York City to aid in the Coolidge presidential campaign, is unofficially slated as chief representative of the United States government in the Philippines, according to a special story to the Philippines Herald from Washington.

Mr. Waldo will be United States commissioner, the article states, if the Fairfield bill is enacted by congress in December.

It is understood that Mr. Waldo has the backing of Manuel L. Quezon, president of the senate, and of other Filipino leaders.

Whereas Leonard Wood as governor-general is ruler of the Philippines, his successor, holding the title of United States commissioner, probably will be little more than a figure-head in the political affairs of the islands under the new bill.

Quezon, and his chief lieutenant, Sergio Osmena, have been waging a strong fight for independence for the Philippines for a number of years. They have fought Leonard Wood ever since he went to the Philippines at President Harding's request to see if they were ready for self-government and reported that they were not.

IRAQ FRONTIER IS DEFINED BY LEAGUE COUNCIL

Peaceful Settlement Reached As Turks And Britain Accept Verdict

(Reuter's Service)

Brussels, Oct. 29.—The decision of the Council of the League of Nations, to which the question of the status quo of the frontier between Turkey and Iraq was referred, establishes a line by which the British give up the administration of a small tract but do not evacuate anything, while the Turks evacuate some villages. No strategically important place is affected on either side.

Both parties agreed to accept the decision.

A neutral commission of three members headed by Count Telecki, the former Hungarian premier, will proceed to Mosul at the earliest possible moment finally to settle the frontier to which this provisional line has no relation.

SERGEANT OF POLICE, SHOT BY ROBBERS, ARRESTS ONE

Heroic Capture Made By Badly Wounded Officer

TWO OTHERS HIT

Civilian And Chinese Constable Struck By Bullets

Unarmed and desperately wounded, Police Sergeant B. B. Boddy, attached to Central Station, gave chase to three armed robbers whom he had intercepted immediately following a robbery at a cigarette and exchange shop at Avenue Edward VII and Shantung Road yesterday morning, and after a pursuit of a quarter of a mile succeeded in capturing one of the men at Canton and Fokien Roads.

The robber's bullet had penetrated Sergeant Boddy's stomach, but, critically wounded as he was, he refused to give up until he had trapped his assailant. Sergeant Boddy is now in the Shanghai General Hospital in a dangerous condition, attending physicians, following an operation for removal of the bullet, expressed hopes for his ultimate recovery, but consider his wound extremely serious.

In the same bandit attack, a Chinese police constable was shot in the knee, and a Chinese bystander suffered a minor wound.

The robber trio made their appearance at the exchange shop at the corner of Avenue Edward VII and Shantung Road shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Intimidating the shop assistants with a display of pistols, they seized $121.50 and, firing three shots in the shop, attempted to make good their escape by running down Shantung Road.

CONSTABLE IS SHOT

A Chinese police constable, on point duty at the corner, was attracted by the shots and attempted to halt the men. The robbers turned, and, opening fire, shot the constable through the knee and wounded a Chinese pedestrian. Hearing the shots a French policeman ran up, but by the time he arrived, the robbers had fled down Shantung Road.

Sergeant Boddy, walking down Shantung Road, met two of the robbers as they were attempting to run away, and gave chase. One of the men ran into a shop and tried to hide himself. Sergeant Boddy followed. As he entered the shop and was about to seize the man the robber fired, the bullet striking the police officer in the stomach.

Although realising that he was desperately wounded, Sergeant Boddy continued the pursuit as his assailant ran out of the shop and through a maze of alleyways. After a chase of a quarter of a mile, he captured the man, and held him until other police officers, who had come up in the meantime, took charge of the prisoner. Only after he had made sure of his captive, Sergeant Boddy collapsed and was rushed to the hospital. Another suspect was taken into custody by the police later.

FOUR MORE ROBBERIES

The shooting came as the climax to a long series of armed robberies, four more of which were recorded by the police yesterday.

Six men, four of whom were armed with pistols, entered a cigarette and exchange shop at 357-8 Cunningham Road Wednesday night. Two of the men stood guard at the door. The other four ransacked the till and seized

FENG OFFERING BIG REWARD FOR CAPTURE OF WU

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 30.—The news of the Chihli disaster on the Shanhaikwan front has greatly heartened General Feng Yu-hsiang, who issued a proclamation this morning offering a reward of $100,000 for the capture of Marshal Wu Pei-fu alive and $50,000 for anyone shooting him.

Lowly Tomato Brings Much Agog In Local Social Activities

Agriculture Professor Settles Dispute Of Ancestry But Not Of Food's Pronunciation

Another problem, ranking along with the more recent one of "Why Is A China War?" has been solved.

C. P. Herman, sailor on the U. S. Black Hawk, now in the river, writes in to the Editor, wondering whether a tomato is classed as a fruit or a vegetable.

The question being along the same lines of whether the egg or the hen came first, the Editor, being wise—in some ways—refers the letter to John H. Reisner, [illegible] Forestry, University of Nanking, Nanking, China.

Mr. Reisner, hoping that his answer will restore peace on the Black Hawk and not cause Gob Herman to lose too much money, replies that the "tomato is commercially classed as a vegetable but botanically it is classed as a fruit."

And that's that with the exception of the correct pronunciation of the fruit—vegetable, whether it's "tomeighto" or "tomahto," a question that is much more heated in Shanghai than the ancestry of said hybrid.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, October 30.—Upon receiving the report that Luanchow was completely captured on the 28th instant by the Fengtien troops under the command of General Chang Tsung-chang, Marshal Wu Pei-fu applied to Marshal Tuan Chi-jui for an armistice but it is said that his proposal has been rejected. It is inferred in Chinese political circles here that Marshal Wu will shortly take to flight in the direction of Shantung or somewhere else by a Chinese man-of-war.

WU PREPARING DEFENSE LINES ON NEW FRONT

Absence Of Expected Backing From Kiangsu And Hupeh Makes Position Weak

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 30.—Marshal Wu Pei-fu is reported to be making a new front at Peitsang near Tientsin, as well as at Lutai, but the absence of the support he expected from Kiangsu and Hupeh makes his position very weak. These measures are considered only temporary defensive precautions, but some anxiety is still evident regarding the next move of the "Little Lion of Loyang".

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, October 30.—The Fengtien troops, which have arrived at Luanchow, total some 25,000 strong, part of whom yesterday afternoon advanced in the direction of Shanhaikwan. CHIHLI PULLING OUT

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 30.—Telegrams received from Chinwangtao report that Fengtien troops are on hills six miles to the North of Chinwangtao, where Chihli detachements are holding them.

Desultory firing is taking place in the Shanhaikwan sector.

Chihli forces yesterday were boarding steamers at Chinwangtao. Already 20,000 have reached Tongku, but the temper of these troops is uncertain.

ATTACK IS ORDERED

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 30.—General Feng Yu-hsiang has ordered a general attack on the Langfang front tonight. The result of this fighting will go a long way to clear the air.

Feng Invites Local Leaders To Tackle National Issues; Part Of Hupeh Army Gone

Local political leaders yesterday received a telegram from General Feng Yu-hsiang and his lieutenants, inviting suggestion for the holding of a conference whereby national issues may be discussed and settled. After reviewing the deplorable condition of the government since the founding of the Republic and the madness of Wu Pei-fu in trying to re-unite the nation by armed force, General Feng said in part:

"I am maintaining the status quo of the government in order to avoid further political complications. But this is a mere transitory move and not to be regarded as my final plan of reconstruction. During this period of internal strife and chaos, we are reluctantly compelled to accept certain existing conditions as a compromise and I trust that the public will be considerate enough to overlook petty cases of dissatisfaction.

"I am aware of the fact that the future work of reorganisation cannot be placed upon the shoulders of one or two men, nor of one or two political parties. It is necessary that the wise and elderly should meet in Peking and hold a peace conference immediately in order to solve the different knotty problems.

"Our action shall hereafter be guided by the decision of the majority, since we have by experience found that majority rule is the best for a democratic form of government. As soon as the wise and just decisions are obtained, we will help in executing them in order to stop internal strife for ever and solidify the foundation of the nation.

"No work is more important than this for the present.

"How are we going to organise such a conference is the burning question of the day! The wise and elderly of the nation and the leaders of the North and the South are hereby requested to give us their valuable advice at once, so that we could act upon them in whatever way we can to hasten the day of peace and tranquility."

Among those who signed the manifesto were General Hu Ching-yi and Sun Yo.

HSIAO NOW NEUTRAL
(Eastern News Agency)

In reply, General Hsiao is said to have stated that the troops had been despatched northward only with the object of defending Honan Province and that they were by no means going to participate in the war between Marshal Wu and General Feng Yu-hsiang.

The bottle cap with the red flap which will be used by the Roselawn Dairy Farm in the future is one of the latest improvements in milk bottle caps, since it eliminates the use of a fork or other instrument to enable the bottle to be opened. All that has to be done is to pull the flap up and the cap may be lifted from the mouth of the bottle. The cap is parafin waxed and therefore is said to be absolutely sanitary.

According to the Yamato, Manchuria is becoming populated with American spies. Military tourists, officers, consuls, journalists—all are at the same game. The method is to stay in Mukden and watch what the Japanese are doing, and to report all they can learn of Mukden military affairs to their Chihli friends. And "now that Korea is going to be affected" (we must confess ignorance as to this new development of the Chinese civil war, says the Japan Chronicle), the American spies are increasing more and more. It sounds very dreadful, but it would be interesting to hear what Japan is doing that the Yamato does not like Americans to see.

The cotton market, Mukden, influenced by the ascent of Mukden notes and the gradual warming up of the produce season along the Railway line, assumed a lively aspect since a few days ago, indeed more re-animated than before hostilities opened. The authorities are perfecting arrangements with the idea of making the proposed fight comparable to that staged yearly by British aviators over London.

The annual report of the President of St. John's University of Shanghai calls attention to the continued disturbed political situation and the effect this is having upon education in China. "Discouraged by the lack of progress and internal disorganisation," says the report, many would-be reformers are turning to education as to that which may prove the means of saving their country. It is seen more clearly than ever that training for citizenship must accompany the development of a democratic system of government." The attack launched by certain Chinese educational leaders upon mission education in China under the headings that (1) they are conducting Christian propaganda; (2) they obstruct the growth of patrotism; and (3) they are deficient in their courses in Chinese literature, history and philosophy, is answered in the report as follows. "To the first charge we willingly plead guilty. We frankly confess that the Mission School or College does aim at advancing the influence of Christianity in this country. As to the second charge, we doubt if it could be substantiated. Many of the men now playing an important part in the life of their country were educated in mission institutions. The mission institution, however, is opposed to half-backed patriotism, and emphasises the importance of internationalism. As to the third charge, we would admit that there is room for improvement in the courses in Chinese in many mission institutions. St. John's is doing much to bring about a reform in this respect, and to remove this reproach."

Andrade And Volaire Draw, Three Boys Land Kayoes, At Empire Theater Boxing

If you want to miss a good fight, don't go. This seems to be the moral of last night's bouts, staged at the Empire Theater, when a poor house saw three kayo events staged, followed by a good fight between two classy lightweights, Volaire and Andrade, who went the full distance of twelve rounds.

With regard to the last-named event, we don't like to offend anybody by calling him a bonehead. We're particularly careful in our choice of words when he happens to be a bird who punches with much the same insistence as a mule kicks. We therefore decline to make any suggestion as to what the bean of one Andrade, a recent visitor from Manila to our fair city, is made up of. If not solid ivory, however, it must be something just as good, considering the number of wallops it took last night from the husky left of Young Volaire. Every time Volaire landed one of his left swings on Andrade's ear he stood back to watch the effect, which, however, so far as Andrade was concerned, seemed to be non-existent.

Not that Andrade didn't do any hitting. He landed oftener than Volaire, and was aggressive throughout, so the draw decision was well received. The pair started off pretty lively, and in fact the newcomer landed the first smack. Volaire came back well, however, and before the round was over cut Andrade's lip with a vicious left. In the second round Volaire landed several times, and towards the end of the round landed some punches which should have knocked Andrade silly, were he governed by the same physical laws as ordinary mortals, but the other boy took it, came back with one or two of his own, and walked back to his corner as if nothing had touched him.

The fight continued in much the same way. From the beginning both boys, though trying for kayo punches all the way, were somewhat wary of each other, knowing that sleep-producers were waiting for them if a real chance were given. Volaire's main shortcoming was in not following up his wallops. He would land a nasty left on Andrade's ear and get back as if he expected the other boy to collapse, but the only collapsing that Andrade did was on his opponent, getting through several times, and landing a couple of vicious wallops in the seventh that actually made Volaire grin, a sure sign that he's being hit. (Volaire has a peculiarly developed sense of humor that sees fun when he gets a slam that would make an ordinary human see nothing but stars.)

In the seventh and eighth the boys were mixing it up harder than in the previous rounds. Both landed some good wallops. At this stage of the game Andrade was generally taking the offensive, and Volaire backing up a bit. The local boy usually opened up Andrade's cut lip early in each round of the fight, however, which made things look pretty even all through.

In the ninth Volaire became aggressive again, and got through with some more of his left swings, but from then on to the end he had nothing on the visitor, who mixed it up well, and landed more frequently than the local boy. At the end of the fight Messrs. Rodger and Himrod, judges, decided it was a draw. Mr. McCoy refereed.

FOUL AFTER KNOCKOUT

In the second fight, between Folyano and Pete, a rather extraordinary thing happened. After several rounds of pretty even fighting, in which Pete landed several good punches in spite of Folyano's superior cleverness and his own clumsiness, Folyano landed a right upper-cut which stretched Pete for the count. At five seconds, however, the gong rang, and Pete was taken to his corner. This was at the end of the fourth round. Pete was fairly well recovered when he went into the fifth. Another knockdown was waiting for him, but he succeeded in getting his bearings again and fought pretty well for about a minute, when Folyano again landed on him with another right uppercut which apparently settled everything for that bout once and for all. Canion, refereeing, had reached the count of nine when Pete struggled to his knees. Pete rose on one foot, but still had one knee on the platform when Rufe counted ten. As Canion finished the count Pete half-rose, and Folyano stretched him with another wallop. Canion, after a moment's hesitation, awarded the fight to Pete, counting Folyano's last blow, struck a half-second after he had counted ten, as a foul.

TWO OTHER KAYOES

In the special event, Alberto vs. Peralto, the local boy lasted out the first round, which was longer than some anticipated. He was, of course, meat for Alberto, who landed his left in Frisco's tummy just before the bell rang. The gong sounded just before the referee finished counting ten, so Peralto was hauled off to his corner, but he was too thoroughly out to appear for the second round.

In the curtain-raiser, between Freddie and Coogan, there was a lively mixup, with Freddie having the best of it. Coogan was sent to the boards for the count in the second round.

CONTRIBUTION OF $350

On account of the poor house last night, four gentlemen who were present made up a purse of $350 for the fighters. They expressed the greatest indignation at the Council's action in refusing a license for the fights in the Settlement.

SHANGHAI HALVES INTERPORT MATCH WITH H-K. GOLFERS

Ferguson And Mackenzie Beat Ferrier And Barrett In Star Contest

The second day of the Interport Golf Match between Hongkong and Shanghai ended, like the first day's play with the two teams even. Shanghai won one match in yesterday's foursomes, Hongkong one, and the third was halved.

The first match was between the two star teams, Messrs. Ferguson and Mackenzie for Hongkong and Ferrier and Barrett for Shanghai, and was won by the visitors. Both of the Hongkong pair distinguished themselves by their play in the singles the day before, when Ferguson lost to Ferrier in a close match, making a score of 74 in the afternoon match as against the local star's 73. Yesterday both players maintained the same high standard of play, and the match was a very interesting one.

In the second match Messrs. Budd and Pilcher for Shanghai won from Messrs. Shewan and Camidge for the visitors, the result being more or less anticipated in view of the play the previous day.

The third match, Messrs. Bennet and Smith for the visitors versus Oswald and Porter for Shanghai, was closely contested throughout. The Hongkong team was looking forward to victory in this match, basing their hopes on Wednesday's play, but the Shanghai pair took the lead early in the match, and were one up and one to go at the final hole. Here, however, Hongkong stiffened up, making the last hole in five and evening the score.

It was an excellent day's golf, and one of the most closely contested Interport matches we have had here. This Hongkong team, who last week made a clean sweep of the foursomes in their Interport match with Manila, are an excellent set of players, and their visit to this port has given us some splendid contests.

WALKING MATCH IS POSTPONED TO DEC. 7, ANNOUNCEMENT

Delay Because Of Abnormal Conditions Here; An American Team

The Committee arranging the International Walking Match here this year has decided to postpone the date of the event from November 23, originally decided on, to December 7. This is in order to give an opportunity for the many intending competitors whose training was interrupted by Volunteer service during the recent troubles to catch up with their practice.

At the time the trouble started in the vicinity, an American team was being formed here for the match, but mobilisation interrupted this. With the extension of the date to December 7, however there is still time to get an American team into shape for this big event, and all Americans interested are invited to communicate with the Sporting Editor of THE CHINA PRESS without delay.

Anking Football

(China Press Correspondent)

Anking, Oct. 25, 1924.—The St. Paul's School, Anking, soccer team, which won the Championship of Central China at the Changsha meet last spring, defeated the strong Boone University Middle School team, from Wuchang, in the opening game of the local season yesterday, by the score of three goals to nil. The St. Paul's players were in poorer form than when they made their brilliant record at Changsha, and the fullbacks and goalie were kept busy defending their goal during the greater part of the game. Only on two occasions, once early in the first half, and again toward the end of the second period, did they uncover anything like their championship form, both of these flashes resulting in snappy dashes nearly the entire length of the field to a score. The third score especially brought the crowd to their feet when Dickens Chang, inside left, came in at full speed and booted the ball into the netting from an all but impossible angle after a series of swift passes from well beyond midfield had stood the Wuchang boys on their heads.

St. Paul's defence was impregnable. Had their offensive play been of the same caliber the score would have been nearer a dozen than three. During most of the game, if they got beyond midfield at all, they seemed to forget which way the Wuchang goal lay, and spent a large part of their time throwing the ball in from out of bounds.

That the St. Paul's backs are entitled to most of the credit for the victory is shown by their preventing a score in the middle of the second half, when no fewer than six corner kicks in succession were taken by the Wuchang players.

All three scores of the game came off the reliable toe of Dickens Chang, St. Paul's inside left.

"He was born with the gift of laughter and a sense that the world was mad." So they said of Andre-Louis Moreau, scion of the French nobility, who became Scaramouche, the clown, whose laughter mocked his enemies and whose madness inflamed the world.—Not in all the pages of fiction is there such a glowing dare-devil character as RAFAEL SABATINI'S creation of "Scaramouche," and not in the history of motion pictures has there been such a production as the photoplay from the Sabatini novel,

COMPLETE ROUT OF LABOR SEEN BY DAILY NEWS

Conservatives To Have More Than Majority; Liberal Party Wrecked

The case was continued in the United States Court for China, yesterday morning, before Judge Milton D. Purdy, in which L. L. Wilbur is suing the American Chinese Steam Navigation Co., Inc., to recover the sum of Mex. $3,314.64 damages for alleged breach of a contract of employment between plaintiff and defendant.

Mr. F. J. Schuhl appeared for the plaintiff, and Major C. P. Holcomb for the defendant.

Plaintiff stated he joined the defendant company as chief officer of the s.s. Tai Jen on December 15, 1923, on the understanding that after six months' service in that capacity he was to be promoted to captain in which position he was to be engaged for a further period of six months. However, in February of this year he became master of the vessel and as such continued until August 22 at a salary of $700 per month. On this latter date after he had brought the vessel to Shanghai he handed the vessel over, his services being terminated by the defendants, though it should have run to December of the year.

Witness denied the allegations which were made at a previous hearing, that he had been guilty of carrying opium on the ship and stated that, as a matter of fact, it had been the compradore of the vessel who had done that, and that when witness had discovered it, he had discharged the compradore. Witness did not know of the opium being on board his vessel on the first trip until it had been discharged at Ichang. The day after there was a fight on board about the sharing of the money for this opium and the compradore's cook had one of his ears cut off in the galley by a meat cleaver, the engineer's boy had his hand split open while the pilot's man almost had his shoulder broken. It was then that the whole thing came to witness's knowledge.

Mr. Schuhl:—Did you see the fight?—No, but I got there in time to pick up the ear which was lying on the deck.

Witness said he had nothing to do with the opium, but opium was always being carried on the ship because most of the men on board were smokers, four out of five men in Szechuan smoked opium. He had never made any money through carrying opium on the vessel, and it was the compradore's offering him money in that respect which led to his being put off the ship. Witness told him to get off the ship and warned him that if he came back he would break his neck.

Plaintiff further stated that the compradore and his relatives on board the ship had previously got into trouble for attempting to smuggle twenty cases of Mausers and two cases of ammunition. One man engaged in that had been shot, two others were in prison but the rest had got free.

With regard to the allegation that he had conveyed copper coins to non-treaty ports, plaintiff said he had had nothing to do with it, and when he discovered it, he had the coin thrown overboard. Witness explained that in that part of the country it was common for people to corner all the copper coins in a town, and dump them on the market elsewhere, then buy up the coins at a very low price and make money by returning them to the town where they had created a shortage and selling them at a profit. Plaintiff also denied that he had entertained ladies on board his ship, but stated that on one occasion the vessel had carried about thirty women at one time, supposed to be concubines for General Yang Sen.

In answer to Major Holcomb, plaintiff admitted that when he brought the vessel to Shanghai for the last time, prior to his discharge, the ship carried between eight and ten piculs of opium, but he denied having anything to do with the matter himself, and said it was not discovered until an attempt was made to land the studd on the Nantao Bund.

The case was continued, in order that the depositions of defendant's witnesses in Chungking might be obtained.

ZIMBALIST, IN FINAL CONCERT, BEWITCHES ALL

Golden notes tumbling down a silver scale; notes clear and sweet as a bird call at dawn; and notes of such beauty as almost to create the illusion that a divine musician was at work with a magic bow. All these and more were distributed last night at the third and final concert here this season by Efrem Zimbalist, the world's premier violinist.

Zimbalist may be most appreciated by earnest students of music who fully understand the supreme technique and the mastery of the difficult compositions which are his. But his adoring public undoubtedly is made up of those to whom the sheer beauty of his music appeals. They may not understand the technique but they feel a tremendous response to the music he evokes from his violin, and music was meant primarily to stir the emotions.

Beginning with the "Suite in Old Style," his own composition, Zimbalist threaded his way through a gorgeous maze of artistic expression to a beautiful, impressive finale. His "Concert" by Mendelssohn, in livelier measure, brought a storm of applause which would not be downed until the artist had responded with a light, graceful encore.

The second half of his program was divided among works by Bach, Gossec, Beethoven, Couperin and Rameau and closed with the exquisite "Faust Fantasie" by Wieniawski. Beethoven's "Rondino" arranged by Kreisler, and an "Air" by Bach stand out in the writer's memory as the most perfect.

So loath was the audience to lose the witchery of Zimbalist's music that he was forced to appear and reappear until he had given three encores, one of which was the lovely, lilting "Molly on the Shore." Zimbalist is as happy in his choice of encores as he is in the arrangement of his programs; all of them were tuneful and filled with a haunting sweetness and melody.

CHILDREN'S COLDS

Avoid Serious Results by Using Baby's Own Tablets.

When a child shows the first symptoms of a cold, such as sneezing, redness of the eyes, clogged or running nose, prompt measures for relief may avert serious results. Mothers should always have on hand ready for use at such times Baby's Own Tablets, which act quickly, contain no opiates or narcotics, are tasteless and harmless. Mrs. Joseph Cadieux, of No. 64 Cabet street, Holyoke, Mass., says:—

"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children, and find them a very satisfactory medicine. When my little boy had a cold I gave him the Tablets at night and he was well the next day. I give them to the children for constipation and they are always benefited. They eat the Tablets like candy. I think Baby's Own Tablets are much easier to give a child than liquid medicine. I recommend them to all mothers who have small children."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by chemists everywhere, or post free 30 cents the vial, from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

Chinese Red Cross Closes War Work With Program

Celebrating the success of the work done during the recent war near Shanghai, the directors of the Chinese Red Cross Society last night gave a banquet in honor of the doctors, nurses and other members of the staff at the Tientsin Road Hospital. About 250 attended the feast, while those occupied in the various hospitals were entertained at their own quarters with special dinners.

Mr. Chwang Teh-tse, resident director, presided. Mr. Sheng Tso-shu, director of the Deliberative Council, thanked the staff on behalf of the society and expressed the hope that the Red Cross may not be called upon again to do the nasty work that it had to do during the last two months.

Dr. W. S. New, field director, in expressing the society's appreciation for the foreign assistance received during the war, especially mentioned the services of Dr. W. W. Peter, Dr. A. H. Swan, Dr. Walter H. Hiltner and Dr. A. W. Tucker as well as the generosity of the American Woman's Club and the British Women's Association and other organisations and foreign sympathisers.

Dr. Peter, in rising to respond, paid an eloquent tribute to the work of the Red Cross of China both in the field of the battle and in the hospitals. It was a wonderful organisation, demonstrating to the world that Chinese could co-operate. The banker is public-spirited enough to work side by side with the coolie in order to bring success to the organisation. During the last two months, the Chinese Red Cross had written a glorious chapter in China's history, he said.

While the stretcher-bearers and the doctors and nurses were working patiently and quietly on the various front, they did not realise, perhaps, that the world was watching them with no mean interest. On October 16, he received a cablegram, asking him to file a full report on what the Chinese doctors were doing during the war. Consequently with the aid of Drs. W. L. New and W. S. New, he managed to send a 22-page type-written report on the situation. He was proud to make such a report. He was proud of the doctors and was proud that he had himself helped in the glorious cause.

Mr. S. C. Lee, head of Lee Lee Garage, who contributed most part of the motor transportation for refugees from the stricken districts to Shanghai, mystified the huge audience with a number of his favorite card tricks and slight-of-hand demonstrations.

The extra staff of the Red Cross will be released today and the society will be reduced to about half of the war time strength, which numbered over 500 men and women. However, the Chinese Red Cross will not be able to return to its pre-war standard until after China New Year in view of the 750 wounded soldiers still under its care.

(1) Any prescription filled in genuine Toric Lenses, either White, Crookes or Coloured glass for $5.00 per pair.

(2) Any lens replaced—we duplicate any broken lens from the pieces or from the prescription—for $1.00 only. We guarantee finest quality lenses, finest workmanship in conjunction with O.I.C. expert service—the best obtainable. Regardless of what you paid for the lens elsewhere, regardless of the prescription, Toric, Flat, White, Coloured, Sir Wm. Crookes or any other glass—Our Charge is One Dollar Only. New aluminium cases, cleaners and adjustments free.

When we first commenced advertising extensively, almost two years ago, other opticians told you it was most unethical. Particularly those old-fashioned opticians who failed to realise what every business man knows to-day, what the "North China Daily News" told you in its columns:—"That a business without advertising is as bad as a business without book-keeping."

When we later advertised prices,—particularly prices which were unprecedented—when we offered to fill any prescription in genuine Toric Sir Wm. Crookes' Glass for which other opticians were charging from $15 to $25.00, for a standard charge of only $5 on any lens prescription, they told you that we were "selling-out," that we were going out of business.

When we prospered on our extensive business regardless of low prices, they told you that optical "price-advertising" was unethical.

But now, the other opticians are imitating by advertising in a small way—they are even advertising "Special prices" on white lenses with frame which is almost 50% higher than our charge for Toric Sir Wm. Crookes lenses complete with European or American Spectacles or Eyeglasses.

There are some things that other opticians cannot copy—and that is the leadership and originality with which we are constantly and consistently improving our service to the public.

Other opticians have not copied, and the O.I.C. is the first and only optical establishment to formulate and publish a standard guarantee on both lenses and frames. The O.I.C. is the first and only opticians to give cases, cleaners, adjustments, etc., free) no charge for small repairs such as springs, screws, etc.,—any lens replaced for $1.—prices marked in plain figures on all frames from $1 up, and standard price of $5 on any lens prescription.

Do not permit yourself to be influenced by malicious lies compounded by jealous interests—investigate O.I.C. Service and compare the results with your experiences elsewhere.

Remember the O.I.C. is the strongest financially of all optical establishments in the Orient, the Largest, Most-Modern and Best Equipped.

O.I.C. Glasses and Examination are unreservedly Guaranteed.

We claim, and can prove, that O.I.C. patrons comprise the foremost professional and business men of this city and outports, including leading physicians, Municipal councillors both Chinese and Foreign.

When you break your glasses next give us an opportunity of PROVING our desire to please and gain your patronage and approval of O.I.C. expert, careful, conscientious service. It is because of our earnest desire to gain your friendship that we have inaugurated our ultra-moderate-service charge of $1.00 only for any lens replacement, any prescription, finest quality guaranteed.

An extra pair of glasses is always a convenience and a necessity in case of loss or breakage. We can duplicate your present glasses, or check over same by examining your eyes for possible improvement, and the resultant glasses will demonstrate that we not only know our business, but that we are expert at fitting glasses that are more comfortable and becoming than any you have ever had.

Let us show you the latest styles and inventions in optical goods. Let us show you the advantages of O.I.C Glasses and Service. Let us prove that we can improve on your present glasses. INTEGRITY IS KEY MARSHALL FIELD SUCCESS---HYPES

Rotarians Hear Inspiring Address From Head Of Chicago Firm

That integrity was the keystone for the establishment of the powerful business of Messrs. Marshall Field and Co., Chicago's premier department store, was the assertion made by its general manager of the sales department, Mr. W. F. Hypes, yesterday before the weekly meeting of the Shanghai Rotary Club at the Astor House.

Quality and service were the two important considerations regarding goods offered for sale to the public, Mr. Hypes said in tracing the history of the firm and in describing the personal character of the late Mr. Field, who like other great American business men, began his life most humbly.

A glowing tribute was paid to the work of the Y.M.C.A. throughout the world in helping employees of the stores along by the speaker who is also president of the Chicago Y.M.C.A. in whose interest he is now visiting the Orient.

The meeting yesterday bade farewell to Mr. Harold C. Norman of THE CHINA PRESS, the club's past president. In a pleasing little speech, the chairman, Mr. Holgate, expressed the appreciation of the club for the services rendered to the organisation by Mr. Norman and took pleasure in pinning the past-president's jewel onto Mr. Norman. Mr. Millington, the Scout Commissioner of Shanghai, also expressed the gratitude of the scouts at Shanghai for Mr. Norman's interest in his organisation.

Mr. Norman responded briefly, saying that he valued the friendship of Rotarians more than any other, and expected to rejoin Rotary in England as soon as he settled down.

Two old members of the club returned yesterday in Mr. George A. Fitch, who led the singing at yesterday's meeting and Mr. Jack Mason, the curio expert.

Former Resident Of Shanghai Files Suit For Divorce

Mrs. Agnes O. Boden, prominent in society in Oakland, California, and former Shanghai resident, field suit for divorce recently against Cecil W. Boden, wealthy real estate broker in Oakland, and formerly connected with the Dollar Steamship Company in Shanghai.

In her suit Mrs. Boden charges abandonment and extreme cruelty. The complaint asks that Mrs. Boden be awarded community property valued at $500,000, attorney fees of $5,000 and $250 court costs. It also asks for $600 monthly alimony.

Without naming co-respondents, the petition declares that Boden spent much of his time with other women and that he abandoned Mrs. Boden while she was ill, leaving her without funds or servants. One woman, which the plaintiff specifies as "Ruth," is alleged to have spent five days with him, from September 26 to 30.

Another portion of the charges declares that Boden had created public criticism by parking his automobile outside the telephone office at 9 o'clock in the evenings and inviting young women to go on joy rides with him.

Boden's income is estimated by his wife to be $100,000 per year. His real estate holdings in Oakland are said to be valued at $5,000,000 or more. The Boden home at 871 Walker avenue, Oakland, according to the petition, is the property of Mrs. Boden, while the remaining property is of community ownership.

The Bodens were married in San Jose November 16, 1915, and were separated September 17 of this year.

Hankow Suffering Epidemic Of Fires; Two More Reported

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, Oct. 34th.—All Hankow was roused this evening by two of its periodical fires without which, it seems, life in this city would not be complete. One was a small conflagration while the other was on a much larger scale and had a wind been blowing at the time, might easily have got out of bounds.

At about eight-thirty o'clock the hooters blew and the volunteers turned out, only to find that the fire was, or rather had been, in a stable in the compound of the ex-Russian Police station. The fire, caused by straw catching alight, was extinguished before the arrival of the volunteer firemen. In the meantime the prisoners had been led out, in chains, escorted by several policemen.

The large crowd which had turned up were disappointed but in less than half an hour the hooters again blew loudly and the crowd's attention was diverted to the Chinese City, on the borders of the British Concession. Here, at about nine o'clock, a fire broke out in Ho Hwa Lo, a lane about one hundred yards from Taiping Road. The blaze, which soon assumed large proportions, started in a shoe-maker's store and spread to an adjoining establishment, the Wei Hsing Printing Office. Although there was hardly any wind, it was with the greatest difficulty that the brigades eventually got the conflagration under control. At least six buildings were destroyed.

The manner in which vamps—screen and otherwise—go about their business of vamping is told in "A Fool There Was," showing at the Isis Theater this week.

Estelle Taylor, reported engaged to Jack Dempsey, world heavyweight champion, plays the Vampire with the usual Fox Films support. The play was inspired by Kipling's poem, The Vampire.

The picture, well-screened with luxurious scenes, tells the story of a prosperous business man, sent on an important mission, being lured from wife, children and business by the vamping powers of the siren, although he witnesses one victim of the vampire shoot himself after being turned down when money ran out.

The wife attempts to bring John Schuyler back to the fold. She nearly succeeds when the vampire snatches the husband away. The husband attempts to kill the vampire but fails to his own death instead. The vampire adjusts her powder and looks around for another victim.

Changes Sought In Canton Government

(Eastern News Agency)

Canton, Oct. 28.—Attention of the public here is shifting from the political change in Peking to how Dr. Sun Yat-sen will dispose of his titles as Generalissimo of the Navy and Army of the South and also of the organisation of the "revolutionary government."

The majority of government officials take the view that the system of the present Canton government should be modified and that another government be organised on the basis of the "state foundation" principles.

They also assert that every effort should be made for the settlement of the East River question for the purpose of effecting the complete unification of Kwangtung Province and of responding to the transition of the state of affairs in the North. Messrs. Liao Chung-kai and Wang Chao-ming yesterday proceeded to the temporary General Headquarter at Shaokwan to discuss some concrete measures in this connection.

Industrial and vocational work is on an increase. Physical education is also being promoted.

Brisk Fighting Proceeds At Shanhaikwan As News Of Feng's Coup Is Heard

China Press Correspondent Writes Of Wu Pei-Fu's Last Day At Battlefront; Fengtien Attacking With Big Guns And Airplane Raids

(The following article by Mr. Impey describes conditions at the Chihli front at Chinwangtao and Shanhaikwan on October 24th, the day of the receipt there of news of Feng Yu-hsiang's coup at Peking).

BY LAWRENCE IMPEY
(Correspondent for THE CHINA PRESS at the Chihli headquarters.)

Chinwangtao, Oct. 24.—Since the arrival of the International train from Tientsin two days ago there have been no events of particular importance to record, though it is worth noting that no fewer than ninety-three trains were passed by the special en route between Tongshan and Chinwangtao, a fact that gives some faint idea of the state of congestion on the line, and also of the quantities of supplies and reinforcements that are daily arriving here to strengthen the Chihli position.

The writer went up to Shanhaikwan with the International on the afternoon of the 22nd and made a trip down to the fort on the sea front to see how the Loyal North Lancashire detachment were getting on, walking thence along the Great Wall to a point from which it was possible to observe the firing line.

The Chihli guns were mostly placed in good concealment some five to eight hundred yards outside the Wall, while their trenches were sited on a line coinciding with that of the old Russian fort, it being noticeable that large bodies of men were employed at the time in extending and strengthening them as quickly as possible. The exact position of the Fengtien infanttry or artillery could not be clearly defined but the results of the fire from the latter were clearly seen on and around the station, half an hour's steady shelling the previous day having done a lot of damage.

At night fell the flashes of the guns lit up the horizon on the semi-circle from Shihmenchai through Santaokwan and Shanhaikwan to the sea, the combined effect of the sudden blaze from shell exploding in the air and the more diffused light afforded by the incessantly wheeling searchlights was most impressive, and gave one a far better idea of the struggle than could possibly be obtained in the daytime from the mere thunder of the distant guns.

THREATEN ADVANCE

With a courteous regard for our feelings Marshal Chang's gunners forbore to shell the station during the presence there of the International train, a fact for which the writer was devoutly thankful as he had already seen on one brief sojourn what they could do on other occasions if they so desired. During the return journey to Chinwangtao it seemed from the direction of the artillery fire that the Fengtien troops were either attempting or threatening to attempt an advance in a new direction, namely a penetration through the mountainous region between Santaokwan and the Shihmenchai valley.

This move would cut the railway in the rear of the troops defending Shanhaikwan if it were successful, to say nothing of threatening the flank of those divisions under Chang Fu-lai who were counter-attacking from Chihwangtao towards Chu Men. Therefore on the morning of the 23rd the writer set out on foot to explore the front operating from Chinwangtao towards Shihmenchai and Chu Men, hoping to grain thereby a clear idea of the topography of the region involved and the disposition of the troops being employed therein.

A walk of some ten miles brought him up to the firing line which he had visited a week ago, and it was at once obvious that the Fengtien forces had been compelled to a considerable retirement, for the salient which had been so noticeable on that occasion was now almost flattened out, and an occasional burst of long range shelling was falling on what had been front line trenches a short time previously.

A turn half left at this point enabled one to follow along the line of battery positions now occupied by the Chihli artillery, thus obtaining a good idea of the actual battlefront while at the same time watching the effect of the enemy's counter battery work. All the shrapnel was bursting too high and the gun crews were not even bothering to get behind cover, but some of the high explosive was more effective, the writer witnessing a direct hit in one lot of gun emplacements which did considerable damage.

LONG RANGE GUNS

It seemed as if Marshal Chang must have brought round some naval or other long range guns, for on a previous occasion the writer had observed that the ranges of the field guns of both sides was nearly the same and that practically nothing was bursting beyond the battery positions. Now suddenly a cloud of dust and bits of rock spattered up at a point some mile and a half behind the normal range, the second shell falling on a group of infantry and ammunition carriers some three hundred yards from your correspondent. As usual the shell was a small one, so that only about seven or eight people were hit, but it was evident from the excitement at the headquarters in the nearby village that this kind of shooting was unprecedented, and in fact regarded very unfavorably as taking a mean and merely mechanical advantage of the less qualified Chihli troops.

The shelling as a whole was much less than on previous days, as was the machine gunning, and seemed to indicate either a shortage of ammunition or a period of repose pending the preparation of fresh plans of attack. The return to camp was uneventful save for the rumor that Feng Yu-hsiang had left Jehol and was marching on Peking, but this report was apparently regarded by the Chinese as purely Japanese propaganda, for they all assured the writer that Marshal Wu had General Feng too securely tied for him to dare to leave the Chihli party.

AIR RAIDS IN MORNING

The peace of the early morning of the 24th was broken by air raids, no less than four aeroplanes coming over and bombing the railway yards and the station. They appeared to have learned wisdom from their previous trips, for instead of crossing the lines at right angles as had been their usual practice, they flew instead directly down the track and endeavored to hit the staff train.

The writer was awakened by the first bomb falling up the line some distance, the second fell outside his coupe window but some forty feet away, while the third dropped on the other side of the train, between it and a cargo of ammunition that had arrived during the night. Writers of novels are mostly poor at descriptive stuff, for your correspondent had an icy chill down his spine, a feverish flush on his brow, a sinking sensation at the pit of the stomach, combined with all the other symptoms of fright ever described, when that third bomb missed the nice little collection of high explosives that seemed to have been accumulated outside his car on purpose to receive it.

The sensation of the moment quickly died away however in participation in the rush for scraps of bomb as souvenirs of the occasion, and this was again forgotten when news was received from special underground wireless that General Feng Yu-hsiang had really seized Peking and the government. As no one else appeared to be aware of the occurrence the writer decided to continue his regular program of visiting the Shihmenchai front on foot, but it was a most peculiar sensation to watch the varying fortunes of the battle and wonder what would happen if one were to stand up with a megaphone of giant proportions and shout "Soldiers! You are betrayed! Peking has fallen, and your retreat is cut off!" At the same time one's mind was full of speculation as to what Marshal Wu Pei-fu himself thought of the situation, and how he would attempt to meet the emergency, for he had always had the reputation of a man who was undaunted by misfortune or defeat.

RUMORS GALORE

The staff car was full of the wildest rumors and suggestions, from an alliance to be contracted with Chang Tso-lin to a sudden declaration for the restoration of the monarchy, while at the same time the more stable elements were discussing the only two real possibilities, the first, would Marshal Wu go all out for a decisive victory on this front by an overwhelming and personally directed push at Shanhaikwan or Chu Men, leaving Peking politics to be settled later, or secondly, would he leave detaining forces here before Chinwangtao while he gathered together every available reserve and rushed them back by train to attack Feng Yu-hsiang before he had time to get firmly in the saddle.

The latter idea was the one which your correspondent favored, for there was only enough ammunition in hand here for a three weeks campaign, and while this would serve to defeat Feng it could not possibly be sufficient for an attack on Chang Tso-lin followed by a struggle with Peking, when the latter city was in a position to cut off all further supplies.

Late in the afternoon of the 24th General Chang Fu-lai had paid a flying visit to headquarters from his Shihmenchai front, and it seemed as if his report had decided the event, for almost immediately after his departure feverish activities were witnessed in the railway yards and sidings. The locomotives all seemed to come to life at once, and with uncouth grunts and strident whistlings crept hither and thither with their loaded trains. One after another filled up with material and men, whistled once more and puffed slowly away southwards to some destination unknown.

Word came down to the writer to stand by the staff car as it might pull out at any moment, but the warning was needless, for he had not the least intention of being parted from it by any less event than a general attack led by Wu Pei-fu in person, and it was evident that this was no longer under consideration as a possibility. From far over the foothills came the grumbling of the guns at Shihmenchai, where the battle still hung in the balance, while as the writer fell asleep the buzz of the field wireless set near by showed that the Generalissimo was even then issuing those orders for the morrow upon which might hang events pregnant with fate for the future of China.

The Majestic Opens Formally Tomorrow

have 31 suites of rooms. Later an addition of 100 rooms will be constructed.

The Majestic has been constructed around the McBain trust home in Western Shanghai. A remarkably artistic tract of ground, with shady nooks and retreats, stretches in front of the main building of the new hotel.

The dancing pavilion, winter garden and kitchens, containing the most modern equipment, are in the new part of the hotel building.

An Italian garden will be found at one side of the vast yard. An English formal garden is to be found in the immediate front of the main building. A thicket of trees to the left will furnish another interesting retreat.

HOME WELL CONSTRUCTED

Not an extra amount of reconstruction work was necessary in the main structure, according to officers of the company. The McBain home was well constructed when built many years ago. Mrs. McBain made many trips to foreign lands to personally select furniture and woods for various rooms. Only a little retouching has been done in the ground floor of the Majestic. The billiard room retains its same "mannishness" atmosphere. The Chinese room where mah-jongg parties promise to become very popular is a colorful space, done in vivid yellows and reds and blacks.

Upstairs, in the suites, much has been done to add to the comfort of the guest. Modern plumbing has been installed. Ceilings have been repainted. Walls have been lined with silk. In the suites, in addition to sleeping rooms with large beds, one will find lounge rooms and sun rooms, many suites containing well stocked libraries.

EMBASSY SUITE

The Embassy suite is the final word in luxuriousness. Situated at one corner of the main building, with exposures from two sides, facing the park, the Embassy suite will be ready for distinguished guests.

Several business men's suites have been provided with conference rooms in the upstairs.

Lounge rooms will be found on each of the three upper floors. These will contain easy chairs and libraries with fireplaces for winter warmth.

Rooms are to be heated by fireplaces. Halls will be steam heated.

PRIVATE DINING ROOM

Residents of the hotel, not wishing to mingle with the dancing guests, will have their own dining room—under a magnificently colored skylight.

An added feature of the new hotel is the Empire Banqueting Room, formerly the private dining room of the McBain family. Here will special and private banquets be given. The room is large. A party of fifty can be handled easily. A large bust of Napoleon dominates the room. A cocktail room and ladies rest room adjoin the Empire room.

And then into the new port:

A dance pavilion with spring floor, capable of holding 450 couples, has been constructed. The tables will be on an elevated plane, a step higher than the dance floor. A fountain will play in the center of the floor. The orchestra shell is at one side. The Majestic band of eight men formerly played at the Astor House.

Off the dance pavilion is the winter garden, wonderfully attractive at night with twinkling stars in the ceiling, subdued lights on the walls and three fountains of water playing in various corners.

MARVELOUS KITCHENS

The kitchens are spotlessly clean, arranged so that no confusion will be had. A service bar is at the left of the main kitchen. The other kitchen will serve the residential dining room.

A modern dishwashing machine, with a capacity of 15,000 pieces an hour, has been installed. The dishes are slowly carried through jets of steaming water by this machine.

Adjoining the kitchens one finds the silver room, the china room, the glassware room, the pastry room, the ice cream room and refrigerators, all necessaries to the complete workings of a well regulated hotel.

Conservatories will furnish fresh flowers daily to the hotel for guests' rooms.

Personnel of the new hotel has been carefully selected by Mr. Taggart. E. W. Alderson, formerly of the Astor House, will be manager. Mons. Lainel will be chief chef with several French assistants. Mr. John Reiger will be manager of the ballroom.

The architect was Mr. A. Lafuente. The furniture and decorations were placed by Messrs. Arts and Crafts.

Mr. J. H. Taggart is in general charge of the system of hotels. H has been in Shanghai for several weeks, giving his personal attention to final touches. He has been assisted by Mr. R. W. Skinner, in charge of the Shanghai hotels.

$319 while the seven shop assistants stood by. Then all ran South in Cunningham Road and made good their escape. No shots were fired. The robbers spoke the Northern dialect and are believed to have been ex-soldiers.

Another cigarette and exchange shop at 272 Paoting Road was visited by armed robbers Wednesday evening. Two men, one of whom was armed, entered the shop and asked for the loan of $300. The wife of the proprietor, who was alone in the shop at the time, protested that her husband was away and that she did not have that much money. Threatening the woman with his pistol, the armed man seized a quantity of 20-cent pieces and 1,300 coppers from the till, and, after helping themselves to cigarettes, the two robbers fled over the Settlement boundary.

ROB SHOE SHOP

Shoes, socks and money totalling $160 in value were stolen by three men who raided a shoe shop at 216-7 Canton Road Wednesday night. Two of the men entered the shop in the guise of customers and began bargaining for shoes. After twenty minutes, when they had made their selection, an accomplice appeared in the doorway. Simultaneously all three men drew pistols and ordered the twenty men and women who were in the shop at the time to maintain silence. Then they seized $129 in notes, 348 ten-cent pieces, three pairs of socks and two pairs of shoes and escaped.

Six men who raided the home of a Chinese at 540 Seymour Road escaped with money and jewelry totalling $1,000 in value. The men appeared at the front door of the household. When a daughter of the owner answered their knock, they informed her that they had an important letter for her father. She opened the door and all six men pushed past her, three of them armed with pistols. There were twenty men and women in the house at the time. All were intimidated and forced to contribute their money and jewelry.

Minor Fist Fight Origin Of Serious Race Riots In Philippines, Reports Show

One Chinese Killed, Several Score Natives And Foreigners Seriously Injured In Street Brawls In Manila And Nearby Towns

Details of the Filipino-Chinese race rioting in Manila received in Shanghai last night indicate the trouble in which one Chinese was killed and scores of Filipinos and Chinese were wounded, some seriously and many thousands of pesos property damage done was the aftermath of a minor fist fight between a Chinese merchant and a Filipino wholesale dealer.

The riot was further incited Monday, after it had nearly died down, by the publication in an extra of a native dialect paper, that 80 Filipinos had been killed by Chinese in the Shanghai civil war. Only a few papers were put on the street before the publication was confiscated but the few were sufficient to incite the Filipino mobs to greater riots and destruction work.

No further persons were killed in the second series of riots but many Chinese stores and tiendas were wrecked.

Speaker Roxas appealed to the mammoth public meeting of more than 10,000 persons for calmness.

Visitors to Shanghai from the Philippines report a strong undercurrent of feeling against the Chinese by the Filipinos. The Chinese dominates the small business of the islands, owning corner "tiendas" where all varieties of goods and food are sold.

This was the first race riot in the Philippines for several years. The rioting and fighting spread from Manila to neighboring cities, Cavite, across Manila Bay from Manila, being the scene of a bloody battle while Cabanatuan, 100 miles north of Manila, the location of several rice mills, owned by Chinese, operating in a Filipino farming disttrict, was also the scene of fighting.

The Manila Daily Buttetin of Monday, October 20, carried the following details of the, weekend of rioting:

Thirteen Chinese were taken to the Philippine General Hospital suffering from wounds received at the hands of Filipino mobs which swept the streets through the Chinese sections. More than 250 Filipinos, charged with rioting, were under arrest.

About 500 policemen and 150 secret service agents have been on continual duty since late Saturday, part of the men being held in reserve. All are armed with riot guns and are under instructions to disperse all mobs of gangs at any cost.

The fighting began Saturday afternoon on Santo Cristo, Binondo, and yesterday had spread to many sections of Manila, nearby villages and on to Cavite.

Filipinos yesterday went from place to place attacking Chinese stores, breaking up their fittings and often attacking the owners. Late last night it was reported that hundreds of Chinese shops have been broken open, thoroughly demolished and a great many of them robbed.

Saturday afternoon Sing Ching, a Chinese merchant on Calle Santo Cristo, became involved in an argument with Roque D. Cano, agent for the Binondo Bazar, 743 Calle Tabora, regarding the delivery of some merchandise to the China merchant. It is reported Cano accused the Chinese of ordering goods for which Sing refused to pay. Following much verbal argument, during which a large crowd gathered about the place, Cano is alleged to have struck the Chinese. In a few minutes the place was a seething mass of fighting Chinese and Filipinos, the crowd in the street taking it up.

Nearby police rushed to the fight, but due to the large number in an attempt to stop the bers involved they made little headway. Patrolman Agulto pushed his way into the place along with several others. He was immediately attacked by the Chinese who sought to take his pistol away from him. In the scuffle the pistol was discharged and the bullet lodged in the thigh of the officer. While this fight was going on Cheng Sui, a Chinese merchant from Cavite was seen to fall. He had been shot in the neck and he died almost instantly. Immediately after he had been struck with a bullet his body was lying in a pool of blood and it was found in this position later when the place was cleared and the police reserves took charge. It is not known defintely who shot the Chinese but it is thought one of the Filipino officers is responsible.

Almost before the smoke of the Santo Cristo affray had blown away bands of wandering Filipinos began to attack Chinese stores and warehouses in all parts of the city and within a short while a race riot well developed had started.

The property damage is heavy. In hundreds of localities the Chinese shops have been attacked, stoned and in many cases entirely demolished. Secret service men stated last night that many places had been practically torn down by the Filipino mob, the contents of the building destroyed or stolen.

Roving bands of Filipinos were mostly in evidence in Chinese sections and in outlying districts of Manila. In the outlying districts few police were to be seen and the Filipinos were gathered in groups along the roadside, squatting in the grass waiting or something to happen or to set out on another expedition against some Chinese. Most of them were armed with knives, clubs and most any implement they could get to wreak their vengeance on the Chinese.

Last night a tour through all Chinese sections in Manila disclosed the fact that the Chinese had been closed and barred in every conceivable way to protect them from the marauders who were parading the streets in instances where the police had not dispersed them. The Chinese are reported to be much afraid of the Filipinos and to be doing everything to keep out of their sight.

Scores of attacks were made by the Filipino gangs and the Chinese suffered severely, both in physical injuries and to their property. The Chinese last night were making little or no attempt to combat the Filipinos except when they were attacked in their places of business or their homes.

The work of the mobs in demolishing the shops has been complete in most cases. One restaurant visited late last night just after the mob had been there showed complete destruction.

Invention Of The Fan Is Attributed To China

The following informative article appears in the current issue of the Chinese Economic Monthly, compiled and published by the Chinese Government Bureau of Economic Information:

The invention of the fan, along with gunpowder and the compass, is credited to China. The first record of a fan is contained in the annals of the Chow dynasty, when Emperor Chao Wang (1052-1001 B.C.) was presented with two tropical birds as tribute, the feathers of which were made into a fan by a courtier named Menghsia. Almost all kinds—feather, palm leaf, stretched silk gauze, "Hangchow" or folding, woven grass, straw braid, wheat straw—found in any part of the world are made inside the borders of China, different sections of the country being centers of production for different varieties.

Palm leaf fans, which have been popular in China since the third century, come mostly from the South, being exported chiefly from Canton, Kongmoon and Lappa. They are considerably cheaper than most of the others, and are an important factor in the commerce of the ports from which they are shipped. Had more care been taken in years gone by in their manufacture, they would have been much more popular in the world's market than they are today. In 1892, 11 million of these fans were exported from China; 10 years later the export amounted to 41 million, or an increase of 300 per cent in a decade. However, partly in consequence of the decline in quality, and partly perhaps the changing taste abroad, demand decreased until now all fan exports total approximately thirty million pieces yearly.

Making the palm fan in South China is a household industry, just as the making of the Hangchow variety is a household industry in Central China. Thousands of women and children are engaged in cutting the leaves, for which work they receive from 10 to 20 cents for 100 pieces. The cheapest of these fans, when finished, do not have the edges bound, although most are trimmed and sewn. The best grades are bound with silk and sell for from 20 to 50 cents each, while the medium variety fetch from $2.50 to $4 per 100. The cheapness and durability of this fan makes it popular throughout China, and each household, especially in Kwangtung province, may have six or eight or more tucked into corners convenient for the use of members of the family and guests.

Another variety to be seen in China is made of strawbraid sewn in a spiral about the center. This is rather small, the most popualr size being but eight inches or so in diameter. At one time this kind, which is made i Hangchow in large quantities, widely used by official and students. It is not to be seen now to any large extent, as its appearance is not very striking and the public seem to prefer other varieties. The retail price of the strawbraid fan in Shanghai is from 20 to 30 cents.

One of the cheapest fans found in the whole country has a bamboo handle which at the upper end is split to serve as stays for a paper web. These are made as part time employment in many parts of the Yangtze Valley, and peddlers sell them for two or three coppers each throughout the country districts. They are exported to Europe and America. In America they are largely used for advertising purposes, a business announcement being added to the picture.

The wheat straw variety is woven into fanciful designs, and is often brilliantly varnished or painted. Soochow is perhaps the chief center for the production of this variety. It is comparatively dear and does not stand hard service. These fans are usually given to children as presents.

About Canton a type popular with coolies and others of the poorer classes is a variation of the Hangchow style. It has a folding bamboo handle and a webbing of plain brown paper. Its durability commends it, some of them lasting for several seasons. It sells from 3 to 10 cents, according to size, quality of paper and general solidity.

Among the feather fans made in various parts of the country, there are of course many sizes and qualities. Those of peacock feathers are made largely in Canton and Huchow, and in varying quantities in many other parts of the country. One of the varieties is of ordinary white goose or chicken feather, on which flowers and other designs are painted with oil. These, like fans of stretched gauze, are considered too delicate in appearance, as well as too fragile for use, for men, and only women carry them. A fan of this kind may be purchased retail for 80 cents or $1.

Some of the finer qualities of the variety require six or eight or even ten months to complete. The fine bamboo used in the stays is imported almost entirely from Annam. The stays of this bamboo are thin and flexible, being preferred because their flexibility creates a strong current of air with but little effort.

It has been said that although millions of fans are made in this country yearly, there are no factories for producing large quantities. This is not exactly true, as one company, at least, in Shanghai, the Commercial Press, is now devoting a section of its plant to manufacturing fans on a fairly large scale.

The Hangchow kind is by far the most popular. More attention is given to its making and decorating than to all the others. The first record of a Hangchow fan is in the tenth century (Sung dynasty). Guilds have been formed to look after the interests of the Hangchow fan makers and to standardise the quality, and the decorative work is quite a professional occupation. Nanking at one time was a producing center of considerable importance, and about 1900 there were 60,000 or 70,000 persons employed in Nanking alone to put together the Hangchow fan. Now, however, Kiukiang, Huchow, Soochow and Shanghai are of more importance than Nanking; although the industry is widespread throughout the Yangtze valley, supplying adjacent communities.

In those districts where fan making has become an industry of real importance, division of laor has been established, making the manufacture a more intricate process than the outside world might imagine. Even the materials are not to be had through one firm. One dealer handles the bamboo, which is later split and trimmed into stays. Another handles paper, and so on. In actual manufacture there are two divisions of work,—making the frame, or "fan bones." ( ), and the web, or "fan face." ( ). In making the frame, which is of bamboo, ivory, bone, sandal wood or a similarly light but strong material, one workshop takes care of sawing the raw material, cutting it into small pieces. A second workshop does the finishing and polishing. If the handles are to be carved, a third workshop takes care of this item. When the stays and handles are made, a separate workshop does the mounting, and if art work is to be done on the paper, this is the province of still another workshop.

Guild workmen in the cities and districts where fan-making is extensively carried on are carried on are jealous of the operation which custom recognises as their prescriptive right, and would certainly make trouble for the uninitiated who might attempt any part of the manufacturing procees not belonging to his class of workmanship. It is customary in some centers for some firms doing a wholesale business to secure materials for distribution to the shops, where the work is completed for the company's account. These firms pay the wages and secure the goods. Another class of firm which does both wholesale and retail trade purchases complete fans from the shops at so much per 100 pieces, and distributes them through its regular trade channels.

In the larger towns where fan making is a recognised full-time trade and guilds have been formed, the workmen performing one operation secure about the same pay as those in charge of another although within each group there is a variation according to skill, etc. The expert receive as much as $1 a day and, of course, food. Those who have only recently completed their apprenticeship and those who are not experts in the work may get as little as 20 cents, with food.

In the country districts where careful division of labor is not maintained, work is done by households. A piece scale is arranged, women and children working on fans in their spare time, just as others in another neighborhood do similar work on embroidery or lace. Collectors from nearby cities make periodical visits for the output of these villages. In Shanghai, a center of fan manufacturing, the workers adhere to the same principle that governs fan manufacture in the rural districts. There are said to be thousand of women in Shanghai engaged solely in assembling, that is, passing, the webs on to the stays.

Embroidery decoration is another household piece work trade, ordinarily engaged in by girls. Agents supply the silk gauze in large sheets with the size of the fan frame outlined on it. Designs are traced at central shops and girl fill in the patterns, supplying their own thread. This is a fairly important business in some districts, as about Soochow, for instance, and many girl earn their pocket money thereby.

In the decoration of fans, pictures, drawn, traced or painted, are used. Written inscriptions in Chinese are no less popular; mottoes and selections from the classics are often found on fans, the idea being that the mind as well as the face of the user may be refreshed. Most shops make it a practice to cater to the literary demands of their clientele, and whatever lines a buyer wishes recording are written on a purchase before delivery. Using these folding fans for advertising purposes is a recent innovation which is being taken up in Shanghai, and probably in other cities where Western keenness for original ideas in publicity is being copied.

In recent years the lithograph has been resorted to for the reproduction of pictures by noted artists. Wealthy persons of course have artists to draw individual pictures and to write for them, and many fans made in this fashion have become heirlooms, no longer to be used by a careless and overheated person, but to be hung on the wall or placed in a glass case.

Carving work on the handles also may be of high artistic value. Dragons and many other fanciful designs and figures are carved thereon. The casual work, as done in the usual workshop, is of little more than passing artistic value, but occasionally an expert workman is employed on a design which may take him a month or more to complete. A purchaser may pay a fee of $20 or more for a pair of artistic handles, or outside stays. Engravers of all classes take pride in their work, and even a man turning out the poorest grade feels it his privilege and right to cut his name at the bottom of a decorated stay.

Every city has a number of men who are noted for their artistic handwriting or painting, as the art of representing Chinese hieroglyphics should be called. The demand for beautiful characters is steady, and those who can do this work find themselves established in a profession. The ordinary charge about Shanghai or Soochow for decorating one side of a fan in Chinese characters is $1, a charge which is doubled if the work is on gold paper. Well-known men, like scholars, industrial leaders, politicians, and others who have made a name for themselves sometimes lend their handwriting to decorate a fan for a friend or even for a stranger, and in this case the writing is in the nature of an autograph. Strangers are charged $4 or $5 for a decoration if the work is done by a professional artist; otherwise, a Chinese is very pleased to autograph a fan for any of his friends. This is one of the privileges in China of the friend of somebody in authority.

Figures prepared by the Chinese Maritime Customs do not show specifically the number and variety of fans exported from each of the ports. Those giving the bulk value of foreign exports of all varieties show Hangchow to be first, Lappa second, Canton third, and Kongmoon fourth.

Detailed figures covering varieties are given in the report for Canton. Those for 1923 are as follows:

Just what is the value of the total fan output in China, it is difficult to estimate, as millions more are used in the country than go through the Customs stations. The total amount exported abroad, as listed by the Chinese Maritime Customs was in 1922, 30,511,000 pieces valued at Tls. 526,714 and in 1923, 28,573,000 pieces valued at Tls. 463,198.

FINANCIERS IN JAPAN PLAN TO BOLSTER YEN

Decide On Counter Steps To Prevent Further Decline

Leading financiers in Japan expect to take counter steps at once to prevent a further decline in the value of the yen. This is being done at the instigation of Government authorities who intend to adopt drastic measures to alleviate the present conditions in the financial market, taking into consideration, however, the opinion of financiers and business men of the country who are interested in Japan-American trade and commerce.

Pointing out the fact that the lifting of embargo on gold would probably be the best measure to adopt in the yen-dollar exchange situation, Dr. E. Ono, president of the Industrial Bank of Japan, made the following statement:

"At first Japanese people overlooked quietly the falling tendency of the Yen but as the situation is becoming worse they are now alarmed at the serious consequences being created. If the cause of the fall in value of the Yen lies merely in speculation, necessary counter steps can be adopted at once but, suppose the depression is actually caused by an unbalanced relation in the international debt and credit accounts, temporary measures must be excluded.

DR. ONO GIVES OPINION

"In my opinion, a fundamental financial improvement must be adopted and money rates must be made as high as possible. In other words, retrenchment must be introduced in the money market to offset the rising prices of commodities resulting from the inflation of currency. The lifting of the gold embargo will take care of this. At the same time, financial retrenchment and thorough-going economy are necessary to prevent imports from increasing lowering prices in general. The encouragement of the export trade must also be made. This will help to balance the export and import trade. The public seem to be laboring under fallacy that the fall of the Yen will speed up the export trade but this is only a transient tendency.

"If conditions continue unimproved for some time to come, the balance between the exports and imports will not be realised. The lifting of the gold embargo is also necessary to meet this situation. It will cause various difficulties and, therefore, careful study is necessary if it is to be effected properly," Dr. Ono concluded.

DR. T. INOUYE SPEAKS

Dr. T. Inouye, vice-president of the Wakao Bank, Yokohama, advanced the opinion as to counter steps to be taken in regard to the fall of Yen saying that there is no other alternative for Japan but to stimulate the export trade, since the aggravation of the value of the Yen is caused through the relation between exports and imports. He said that Japan would witness the import value amounting to Y180,000,000 after October of this year the entire amount of imports will total about Y554,000,000 during the entire year. This enormous import fund, he said, will have to go through the exchange banks and the fluctuation of the exchange rate is only natural under the circumstances. Dr. Inouye further said:

"As the present wide fluctuation in exchange rates is caused through the relation of exports and imports, the only effective counter step is to increase the exports and decrease the imports. This is the only feasable policy to follow in maintaining the value of the Yen. The increase of exports is, however, connected with the price question in Japan; cost of domestic production, money rates, labor wages and national dissipation and can not be expected to be settled quickly.

"The immediate step for regulating the Yen-Dollar exchange rate is to replenish Japan's oversea specie either through the Government or exchange banks concerned and, if necessary, regulate the export of domestic specie. The entire lifting of the ban on gold export is advocated by some financiers but this policy is scored because it would leave Japan shorn of her domestic specie holdings and thereby render the foundation of the country's conversion system jeopardised. It is questionable in my mind whether it is necessary for the country at present to preserve specie amounting to about Y1,000,000,000, which is almost equal to the amount of convertible notes issued, or not," Dr. Inouye concluded.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Mitland, Fearon and Brand state in their exchange circular for the week ending October 29: The price of bar silver in London has followed the course of during the week, today's quotations of 34⅛d. ready and 34⅜d. forward, being respectively ⅝d. and ⅛d. lower than those ruling this day last week; China has consistently been reported as a seller. The official T-T rate on Lodon has followed the course of silver and declined from 3-5d. to 3-4¼d. Speculators have bought gold T-T fairly heavily during the last few days and their oversold position in yen, referred to in ours of last week, has been liquidated and an overbought position both in sterling and yen created; it is estimated that their over bought position in yen is approximately Y. 10,000,000. Under their influence the market has been distinctly weak but closes quiet and steadier with the following rates offering:—T-T on London 3-4⅛d. T-T on New York 76¼.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and bar silver Tls. 53,053,000 a decrease of Tls. 666,000.

Chinese and Mexican dol $46,910,000 an increase $450,000.

Silver yen. Yen. 800,000.

Estimated value Tls. 86,759 as against Tls. 50,383,000 he this time last year.

Coal Market

Messrs. Wheelock & Co. state in their freight market report:

Japan Coal:—Although hostilities in the neighbourhood of Shanghai have ceased, the civil war in the North still continues and this has the natural result of increasing the demand for Japan coal on our local market;—A fair amount of business has been done with native dealers and the demand still continues.

Weather Reports

Oct. 29.—The high pressures are spreading over Central China. Three areas of low pressures: a deep depression to the E of Yezo, another one over Lake Baikal and the typhoon of the Pacific Ocean which advances W ward or WNW ward threatening northern Luzon. Cyclonic circulation and rough weather off Eastern Luzon. NWly winds backing to the East along our coast; variable over Shantung; fresh winds of monsoon in the Formosa Strait. Very fine weather in Central China and over our coasts.

Oct. 30.—Milder and cloudy weather; the pressure is still high; slight Easterly breezes.

Oct. 31.—Overcast or cloudy and mild weather. A depression crossing Chihli will advance ESE-wards. The Philippines typhoon advancing Westwards or WNW-wards is apparently extending as a low area around Norhern Luzon. Unsteady winds with calms or mists over the Northern Yellow Sea. Southerly to SEly breezes along our coasts. Monsoon further to the South.

How The Situation Stands Now

IF Yesterday's reports of the complete routing of General Wu Pei-fu Chihli army at Chinwangtao are confirmed, it probably means the end of the war in the North as far as major engagements are concerned. General Wu has announced his determination of fighting the Christian General Feng Yu-hsiang for the possession of Peking, but unless he can obtain substantial help from the Yangtsze Provinces, this fight may not eventuate, for no one knows better than General Wu himself the fighting abilities of the Christian General and his army of 15,000 men. Foreign military experts familiar with the merits and demerits of China's various fighting units are almost unanimous in the belief that General Feng has about the best fighting force in China—and General Wu Pei-fu knows this.

Now as to the possibilities of the Yangtsze Provinces sending reinforcements northward, this is purely matter of speculation. All of the Yangtsze tuchuns have a nominal allegiance with General Feng Yu-hsiang, the man of the hour at the national capital. They may disapprove of his actions in "double-crossing" General Wu Pei-fu, but when it comes to a matter of taking sides and actually sending forces to the north to help Wu each and every one of these militarists in the Valley will have in the back of his mind the question, Of what benefit is this going to be to me personally? The result of this serious consideration may be the sending of a small "face-saving" force to help Wu but at the same time private negotiations may be going on with the Christian General to determine what the final line-up is to be with the new power in Peking and the new development in Manchuria.

It is not yet clear just what the relations are to be between the Christian General and the warlord of Manchuria. The inspired reports from Mukden which were intended to lead the world to believe that the Peking coup had been engineered from General Chang's headquarters probably were premature. If the Christian General is inspired by the high principles which his propagandists attribute to him, he would make a strange political bed-fellow for the Fengtien dictator. If General Wu persists in his plans of attacking Peking, this naturally will force Generals Chang and Feng together to oppose the common enemy, but after that it may be another story. They may be able to get together on the election of Tuan Chi-jui to the Presidency and the organisation of a new government. General Chang Tso-lin with all of his faults has never held himself out as the savior of China from the standpoint of governmental organisation. With General Wu out of the way or forced into the Yangtsze valley, he may be satisfied to leave Peking to General Feng who does have ideas on the matter of governing the Republic.

To look back over the happenings of a few weeks, it is remarkable to consider what apparently has happened. General Chi Hsieh-yuan, tuchun of Kiangsu, had an overwhelming ambition to govern Shanghai and to remove this city from the "oppressions" incident to its control by the neighboring province of Chekiang. In order to deliver Shanghai, General Chi mobilised his forces and started the war. It is reported that General Wu Pei-fu opposed this move and only supported the Kiangsu marshal half-heartedly. But General Chi being young and ambitious went ahead and took the plunge. The war which he thought would last but a couple of days dragged out and finally dragged about all of the rest of the country into the whirlpool. Chang of Mukden was forced to come to the assistance of his associates in Chekiang and General Wu Pei-fu had to mobilise the entire resources of men and munitions of the Chihli party to meet the danger. And in the midst of it one of General Wu's associates decided upon independent and direct action and seized the seat of government, thus wrecking the Chihli Party and causing the probable effacement of General Wu Pei-fu from the political-military map of the land. If General Wu really opposed the action of General Chi in starting the war at Shanghai, he is now in an excellent position to say, "I told you so!" to his Nanking associate.

The hope in the situation is that General Feng may be able to call his conference for the unification of the land and thus putting an end to the worse than useless—criminal is a better word—military checker-board game that has been in progress for so many years. If General Feng can get such notables as Dr. Sun Yat-sen, Chang Tso-lin, Tuan Chi-jui, Tang Shao-yi and a few others together around a conference table, it will be a notable occasion and should be properly filmed for the edification of an interested and unbelieving world.

Since the foregoing paragraphs were written there comes the news of the receipt by Chinese bodies in Shanghai of telegrams from General Feng asking for suggestions on the subject of a national conference and the further news of strenuous efforts being made to bring about a reconciliation between the Christian General and Wu Pei-fu. And in addition to this the news that General Yen Hsi-shan, governor of the so-called "Model Province" deciding to cast his lot with General Feng. The fact that the country is practically exhausted would seem to indicate the possibility suggested before that active fighting of a serious character is about over and that China's military and political leaders have about reached the negotiation stage—which is about the most encouraging feature of the whole situation.

The British Election

WHILE at the time of writing sufficient returns from constituencies in the British General Election have not come to hand to enable anything like an accurate forecast of what will be the ultimate result of the polls held on Wednesday—though by the time these lines appear such may have come to hand—there is sufficient to indicate that the policy of eliminating three-cornered fights where Labor was successful in the last Election has been moderately successful. It will be remembered that as a result of an official arrangement between Conservatives and Liberals some seventy three-cornered fights which gave Labor such an advantage before, were dispensed with, the issue in these districts being confined as between Conservative and Labor, and Liberal and Labor. If there is any conclusion to be arrived at this juncture it would appear to be that Labor has not held place in its own constituencies. South Salford which was Labor has surrendered to the Conservatives, Wakefield, Salford North and Salford West went the same way, with the result that in four neighboring constituencies, where a solid Labor vote might have been expected Conservatives have gained the day. At Burnley Mr. Arthur Henderson, the Labor Home Secretary, has had his majority reduced by about 2,600 votes in a straight fight with a Conservative candidate, at Barnsley, where Liberal fought Labor, the latter's majority has been reduced from 5,790 to 953.

Probably the most serious blows which the Labor cause will receive in this election have already been administered by the losses the party have sustained in the Midlands, for if the cause were to expect solid support anywhere in England, it surely must have been in the industrial districts represented by the Salford constituencies and Wakefield. Owing to arrangements which have only been in existence a few years, whereby the polling takes place simultaneously all over England, these results will have no effect upon the general outcome of the election. And it is not possible to say nowadays that the example set by the Midlands will be followed by the rest of the country. For that purpose these results, which have up to the present come to hand, may not be indicative of the final result, though it would appear that the accession to power of the party led by Mr. Baldwin is not improbable.

This party has won three seats from the Liberals in constituencies where there have not been straight fights. Whether Mr. Asquith's following is thus to be made the chopping block of the Conservative and Labor contestants is not at present clear, but it would seem, from the indications we have at present received, that where the Liberals have stood down, their vote has gone more in favor of the older party remaining than in favor of Labor. As we wrote at the conclusion of the last general election there is a danger that eventually the Liberal party will be forced out of existence in the struggle between those elements represented by Labor and those for which the Conservatives stand. This is not altogether to be regretted, for in the struggle which is looming ahead in England, a clean cut issue would seem to be the best for the country at large. In any event that is what must come ultimately, and the day may not be so very far distant, despite the optimism of Mr. Lloyd George, when the Liberal Party will undergo a process of disintegration, and absorption into the ranks of the other two parties.

Other Views Than Ours On The War In China

WAR AGAIN AND NO ISSUE AT STAKE

(The Endicot, N. Y., News Dispatch)

China takes the front page. There is war. And the reason for it is just about as absurd and pitiful as the reasons for the other wars which in late years have had their days on the front page.

Probably China's reasons are even less excusable than those for war which have struck nearer home to us. For China's civil strife is just a recurrence on a menacing scale of the little private wars between generals that have broken out spasmodicaly for three or four years past and kept the country in turmoil.

In a pond just big enough for one frog two frogs have been croaking defiantly for some time. Governor Lu Yung-hsiang of Chekiang province and Governor Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu province. They have now decided to fight it out. Chekiang and Kiangsu, being adjoining provinces and by their position commanding the wealthy city of Shanghai and the strategic mouth of the Yangtze, the stake is big.

In addition, Chi Hsieh-yuan is allied to Wu Pei-fu, the leader of one of the two military groups, while Lu Yung-hsiang is allied to the opposing group, headed by Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian dictator whom Wu Pei-fu defeated two years ago and who since has been smarting for revenge.

No issues, no matters of policy are involved. It is a personal struggle between two groups of generals, all of whom have been equally pestilential. Now news comes that Chang Tso-lin has declared war upon the Peking Government supported by Wu Pei-fu and that Sun Yat-sen may try to assist the Manchurian commander in a campaign against their common foe. That may widen the trouble. Another war and futile, too.

Europe Helping Herself Effectively At Present

Europe, today, is hard at the job of working out its own salvation. European rebuilding is no longer being delayed by those who looked to the United States to supply the materials. The people of Europe who have been inclined often to seek solace for their post-war difficulties by star-gazing toward America are turning to help themselves and—more important—to help each other. And a new Europe is emerging.

This, in brief, is the way Colonel Edward M. House, who has just returned to the United States from three months abroad, summarized the European situation in an American Press interview. Seated on a stone bench in the English garden of his daughter's estate, he reviewed, in broad outline, the developments in Europe since, a year ago. Today he said that Europe, after four years of ineffectual efforts to find a way out of the morasses left by the war, finally, on the road to settlement. "There are better, brighter days ahead," he had declared then, and now he brings confirmation of the fact that those days, already, have come.

"Europe," in the opinion of Colonel House, "is returning to the opportunity that confronted it in 1919. The desire for peace was then at a flood tide. But that tide ebbed out while Europe waited on the leadership of the United States. In its wake came the fears and strife, the international bickerings and fruitless negotiations which, through four years, made settlement impossible. Politics, more than public opinion, had its day during those four years. Now, public opinion has become articulate again—as it was articulate in 1919—and there is a new surging of the desire for peace."

DO THEIR OWN SOLVING

This new situation, Colonel House points out, is even more hopeful in many respects, than the the leadership of the United stuation in 1919.

"There is no waiting, now, for the leadership of the United States," he declared. "If the problems of Europe are solved it is plain enough to Europeans that they must do their own solving. They have their own solving. They have their own leaders and are confident that they can find their own solutions. Ramsay MacDonald in England and Edouard Herriot in France afford the best personal evidence of European self-confidence. Both of these men came into power to do one thing—to bring settlement. France and England had tried almost every other policy save that of conciliation as represented by these two leaders. MacDonald and Herriot were given office in order that conciliation might have a chance. And conciliation is working.'"

Here Colonel House came to a consideration of the League of Nations. No American, with the exception of President Wilson, himself, was more intimately concerned with the League's beginning than Colonel House. And no American, probably has followed the League's varying fortunes during the last four years more carefully than he. Colonel House believes idealism has a place in international politics. He believes that the League may be practical instrument for international idealism and that developments at Geneva, during the last few months, indicate its fitness for that service.

WORLD CLEARING HOUSE

"The League of Nations, said Colonel House, "is no longer doing merely the work of an apprentice at this job of international adjustment. It is proving itself a genuine master of its craft. For a time it appeared that the League's chief function would be to do the odds and ends of international work, many of which had no great significance. It is a clearing house, and very important as such, of the world's common interests. Now, however, it is becoming, also, the clearing house for the world's disputes. Compulsory arbitration will give the League the power for place, which up to now, it has lacked. Ramsay MacDonald and Eoudard Herriot are, I am certain, absolutely sincere in their advocacy of the League. They not only believe in the League's power but they believe in the League idea, itself. As a result, Geneva has behind it a stronger support, by far, than at any time since the pence conference."

It is through the machinery of the League, Colonel House pointed out, that the conciliatory policy of Herriot and MacDonald is being worked out. And that policy, which includes the major problems of European and world settlement is not dependent for its operation upon the whims of the legislative assembly of the United States.

"Europe has no fear of the United States as a possible aggressor nation," Colonel House said. "As a result, the governments of Europe are not greatly concerned what we do over here on the subject of disarmament, arbitration and so forth.

"They are going ahead to solve their own problems in their own way. If the United States wants to join in—well and good. But to join in will involve working through the League, for Europe is turning to Geneva to make the League strong enough to handle those situations in which Europe ana Europe's world are primarily concerned. Thus, if there is to be a disarmament conference it will be, as Ramsay MacDonald recently declared, a League conference—and not an extra League assembly called together in Washington at which all mention of the one

The Whale Of The Saucy Anna

(From The Saturday Evening Post)

A sailorman hoary, was Patrick McRory—
A seasoned old sea of the sea.
When telling a yarn he would never use blarney—
At least, that is what he told me!
"I'll tell you a new one, a perfectly true one,"
Said he as we rambled along.
"Let's see, now! The date is 'way back in the 80's,
My very first trip to Hong-Kong.

"The brig Saucy Anna had sailed from Savannah.
Her cargo? Just what she could get!
She raced two windjammers clear past the Bahamas,
Her sails every inch of them set.
She kept on her way in a smother of spray,
With a breeze that was steady, though light,
Till, all in a flash, came a terrible crash,
In the black of the tropical night.

"The crew, in a panic, with fury Satanic,
Fought madly to get to the boats;
But with curses and thumps they were set to the pumps,
As I shouted: 'Keep cool, men! She floats!'
But 'twas plain she was sinking! The old tub was drinking
Much more than her vitals could hold;
Though the pumps helped a bit, she was too badly hit,
And she soon in her death struggle rolled.

"The cause of our plight was revealed with the light.
'Twas a derelict just on our starboard.
The horizon was bare, except for a pair
Of frolicking whales on the larboard.
They were headed our way, as they spouted at play,
And were soon nosing round us a bit,
When one made a dash for the place where the crash
Had occurred when our vessel was hit.

"It seems that the cook had baited a hook
With a large piece of fat pickled pig.
Splash! Over it went, and dropped clear in the rent
That gaped in the bow of the brig.
The whale saw it splash! With a furious dash
He followed it up with his snout.
'Twas a titbit indeed! He went in with such speed,
That he stuck, and he couldn't back out.

"'Tis a fact scientific, precise and specific,
That a whale, if it's tickled, will spout.
So the cook drove a nail through the end of a rail,
And tickled her under the snout.
She spouted, of course, with consid'rable force,
While the captain was pleased as could be.
Every time she would spout she would throw water out
From the vessel back into the sea.

"They kept the pumps going, they kept the whale blowing,
Till the Anna was dry as a chip;
And the cook fed the whale with some stuff from a pail,
For 'twas now quite the pet of the ship.
And when it had dined it grew very resigned
To its fate, so it helped things along,
By wagging its tail, which, helped by the sail,
Soon took the brig into Hong-Kong.

"Now the crew, by this time, thought it would be a crime
To desert their affectionate pet,
For she'd nowhere to go—so, as far as I know,
She's a-sailing around with them yet."

—Alfred I. Tooke.

Metaphysics And Psychology

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Metaphysics, when wearing the cap of "science," has never done anything more serious than piling up words, and there is no reason to suppose that it ever will. Professor William McDougall, the successor of William James in the psychology chair at Harvard, wishes to have psychology declare its independence of the physical sciences, and set up its own methods, different from theirs.

He is surely right in opposing the view that man, mentally as well as physically, is no more than a cunning machine, operated solely by the self-play of chemical and physical forces. But, would it be likely to help clear up the mystery of man's nature, if the investigations of practical psychology, which have given many remarkable results in recent years, were dropped, and psychologists were to follow Profesor McDougall's advice and to start out anew with the idea that "the life of man is one long series of purposive strivings?"

"Purposive striving" is his new psychological watchword. He illustrates it, interestingly, even romantically, by the case of the young man who, despite all counter currents, keeps on steadily striving toward the one being whom his heart has chosen. Certainly no one would wish to see that explained, as Jacques Loeb explained the movements of caterpillars, or other small creatures, on the unromantic principle of "tropism"—although the case of the heliotrope would soften the application, for Juliet is always as a sun to Romeo. But "purposive striving," while undoubtely expressing a general fact in human experience, seems to lack the firmness and sharpness of cut that the cornerstone for a new building of science should possess. Somehow there is about it a slight odor of metaphysics. It does not look like a good basis for logical reasoning. Is it not in the nature of a "begging of the question"? Or is it to be a fundamental axiom of the new psychology, back of which there shall be no thoroughfare for the unsatisfied inquirer?

We BELIEVE, of course, that we strive, purposely, toward our ends. No man who has made a scoop in Wall Street, or established a new bank, is open to the suggestion that it was only a chemical snap in his brain, with which what he calls "me, myself," had nothing to do. He believes that HE did it. Others also believe that he did it. But, when we come to scientific evidence, there is no known method of demonstrating that "I myself" am the final master of my own doings and thinkings. And there is where every attempt to juggle metaphysical belief into scientific proof, is bound to fail.

If we start out to build up a "science" of psychology only on such conceptions as "purposive striving" we are building on clouds. And yet, I do not for a moment dispute the probability that we really ARE the originators of our own thoughts, and that we can exercise free will in the management of our lives. We DO strive purposively, as Professor McDougall affirms, and our consciousness, or believes that he possesses it, a satisfactory substitute for scientific proof. But it is only a personal belief, a FAITH, and it cannot be used as an axiom on which to base a demonstration capable of satisfying anyone who rejects the belief.

The characteristic of real, scientific proof is that it rests on the universal experience of mankind, VERIFIABLE by the PHYSICAL senses. Anything beyond that is metaphysical in its nature—the subject of faith, and not of demonstration. YET, IN ITS OWN FIELD, METAPHYSICS MAY BE AS TRUE AS SCIENCE.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

For years she served us loyally,
And with a large degree of skill;
Her cheerfulness was good to see,
The place she held is hard to fill;
The pies and shortcake that she made
Were like one's fondest hopes come true;
If she had asked us we'd have paid
Twice what she got, and gladly, too.

We left the children in her care,
And knew that she would guard them well;
If there were extras here and there
She didn't grumble or rebel;
The babies learned to go to sleep
While nestling sweetly in her arms;
Since she is gone our loss is deep,
For she had certain priceless charms.

The shock was sudden and severe,
We both were stunned—the wife and I;
It came like lightning from a clear
(To borrow an old saying) sky.
"Don't go!" I begged; "I'll gladly pay
The price they've offered you, and more;
Your tasks, if you'll consent to stay,
Shall be much lighter than before."

But, oh, the base ingratitude!
Her answer cut me to the quick;
Some people's logic is so crude,
Their heads appear to be so thick!
"I'm sorry, if you prize me so,"
She answered, seeming half in doubt,
"That nothing but my chance to go
Could ever make you find it out."

Revived Interest in Neckwear Brings Back Pleated Frills

When ruffles and frills are revived in women's fashions we speak of them as being eminently feminine. But the fact is that the frill was a masculine fashion before it was feminine, and the present-day interest in frills and ruffles is part of the revival of an historic fashion for men—not for women. The fact is that it was the men of the Directoire period who wore neck and cuff frills, and the present interest in these things is part and parcel of the present leaning toward the Directoire mode.

The neck frill, the gilet frill, the shirt frill, have taken strong hold on the imagination of French dressmakers. Much is said concerning a "revived interest in neckwear." As the French say, women are again trimming their necks, and frills—especially pleated frills—are frequently chosen for this purpose.

Doeuilet who, as much as any French dressmaker, sponsors the Directoire, seems to be stressing pleated frills especially. He shows turn-back cuffs edged with pleated frills and long shawl collars with frills all around. A coat frock of black ottoman from this house is worn with a gilet of steel lame showing a narrow pleated frill on either side the narrow box pleat at the front and around the small eton collar. The sketch shows this same sort of front frilling. The frock here is of beige flannel and the frilling down the front and at the cuffs is of cream georgette.

A revived interest in pleated frills comes hand in hand with the undoubted revival of interest in neckwear. No comment on the new mode seems complete without some remarks about the tendency to provide some sort of neck trimming. Frequently this takes the form of high collars—a mode sure to have fewer followers here than abroad. But though American women may be unwilling to adopt a mode that would cause them the discomfort of a high-collared neck, they will be more than willing to adopt the mode of a "finished neckline."

bad form and inappropriate for wear in daylight—and that they should be reserved for evening entirely.

Laced oxfords are really not appropriate for any sort of afternoon frock but should be worn only with tweed or knitted sport or tailored costumes.

Flesh colored stockings are still worn with evening dress but it is a newer fashion to wear stockings to match the frock with brocade slippers to match or in silver or gold.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

ONCE UPON A TIME

It is not exactly unusual nowadays to hear of parents who prefer boy babies to girl babies, but one also finds occasionally a parent whose heart is so set on having a daughter that the birth of a boy baby comes as a disappointment. Usually in a family where there have already been two or three boys there is as much hope that the "next baby" will be a girl as there is hope for a boy when three girls have already entered the family circle.

But this is a very modern point of view. Long, long ago it was not unheard of or stern fathers to put superfluous girl babies out of the way, and, even later, girl babies met with a cool reception. The gilded cradles and finely embroidered baby clothes were put away—to wait a boy baby—and the unwelcome girl shifted as best she could. It is recorded that when Isabella, Marchioness of Este, presented a daughter to her husband, Lorenzo de Medici wrote a letter on condolence to the disappointed husband.

There some folks who insist that very thin stockings are always in bad form for the street, but, though this may once have been the case, there are women of good taste who now wear very thin stockings on the street. However, if you wish to give just the right impression you cannot go wrong by avoiding over sheer stockings for street wear.

Some people will tell you that any sort of satin shoes are quite would seem to be the likely successor."

Of one thing, however, Colonel House appears to be convinced. That is the workability of good will, on which these statesman rely, as the basis for a foreign policy.

"The very atmosphere in Europe seems to have altered," he said, "since the policies of suspicion and fear have been supplanted by those of friendship and understanding.

If conciliation can continue for a few months longer, I believe the people of Europe will refuse to support policies which have any other basis."

Your Vacation Expenditures

Are you planning to spend more on your vacation than you can afford in order to impress others with the idea that you possess more than you actually do?

In the past you may have done so and returned home with the feeling that you were a fool.

It is not difficult to spend a year's savings in few days of lavish enjoyment and entertainment.

Then it is back to the grind with the thought that you have allowed your vanity to run away with your good sense.

Certainly you would like to visit a good vacation spot, associate with it. But it is worth a year's savings?

There are places where you can meet just as good people and get your needed recreation well within your means.

If you use common sense you will still have that nest-egg in the bank when you get home from the vacation, and you will not be blaming yourself for the next year for foolish expenditures.

Europe Helping Herself Effectively At Present

effective international organisation in the world will be taboo. The governments of Europe are not enough interested in what the United States will do on the subject of disarmament to scrap their League machinery for the sake of American patronage at such a gathering.

ATMOSPHERE CHANGED

Colonel House made it plain that if, two or three years ago, a Presigested calling a disarmament conference, the heads of Europe's governments would have "jumped at the chance." 'But it is indicative of the new confidence and hope in Europe," he said, "that there has been no such spontaneous reaction to the recent suggestion of President Coolidge. As between the League of Nations functioning the year around and an occasional American sponsored disarmament conference, the nations of Europe have already chosen."

The foreign policies of both the MacDonald and Herriot Governments, according to Colonel House, are based on the establishment of international good will. Given a long enough lease of life for those Governments and he believes the advantages of such policies will be so clearly demonstrated that whoever succeeds the present Prime Ministers of Great Britain and France will be obliged to continue them.

"In France, Herriot is obliged to deal with an erratic majority in the Chamber and with no majority at all in the Senate. His difficulties are apt to arise on some domestic rather than on a foreign question. But even should Herriot be overthrown I see very little chance for the return of Raymond Poincare, Aristide Briand, or some statesman more closely representing the Herriot point of view than Poincare,
